BERDON—MAKING THE WORLD LESS TAXING

The global marketplace is a complicated environment, where money and opportunity flow easily but taxes and local business regulations create barriers. Governments everywhere are trying to tax transactions that cross their borders, and the new tax rules often involve ambiguous meaning and uncertain application. The result: a bewildering set of challenges for international businesses.

Berdon LLP can make that environment more business friendly. Dealing with international taxes today requires a mastery of tax laws, a deep understanding of business, and a feel for the international marketplace — qualities found in Berdon and its international tax department. An invaluable resource to businesses and individuals, the department is led by nationally respected authorities and includes staff whose only duty is tax research. More than mere theoreticians, the international professionals at Berdon have helped a wide range of clients to meet and profit from real-life challenges.

Among the services we provide are:

- Advising on inbound and outbound transactions
- Helping U.S. businesses open foreign operations and helping foreign businesses establish a U.S. presence
- Planning for the consequences of multinational organization
- Guiding individuals on their international tax obligations and how to minimize them

Berdon is a member of TIAG, a global alliance of more than 115 independent accounting firms in over 65 countries and, through TIAG's sister alliance with TAGLaw®, we also have access to more than 150 independent law firms in nearly 90 countries. This membership gives Berdon's team members and our clients access to accounting, tax, and legal professionals around the world.

At the same time that business taxation has become more complex, the taxation of individuals across national borders has grown more sophisticated. Resident aliens, nonresident aliens, and cross-border property owners face some of the world's most challenging tax rules. Berdon's seasoned international and domestic tax professionals can unravel the tangle of laws, regulations, and rules, and can find solutions to tax problems for individuals, just as they do for all types of business entities.
